

QUATTRO BOARD OF DIRECTORS – RESTRUCTURE

GLOUCESTER, 18th APRIL 2023 – Quattro Design Architects, a leading architectural practice specialising in sustainable design, has announced a significant re-structure of its Board of Directors. With almost 80 years of collective experience, Quattro's Board of Directors is well-equipped to handle a range of sectors, from residential to health and education to commercial and leisure.

The new structure of Quattro's Board of Directors will feature Joint Managing Directors Richard Fellows and Robert Walder, who will use their extensive experience as sector directors to guide the company forward alongside Andy Tansill, who remains a member of the Board. Additionally, Mark Robins, previously an adviser to the Board of Directors, has joined the Board as a Non-Executive Director. The restructuring is part of Quattro's commitment to providing clients with the highest quality sustainable designs.

In a joint statement, Richard Fellows and Robert Walder said, "We are excited about the promotions of Jonathan White, Kate Da-Costa-Greaves, Rob Gage, and Matt Moody, and the restructuring of our Board of Directors. With such a wide-ranging set of abilities, we are confident that the company will continue to scale new heights while remaining true to our sustainable and collaborative roots. As we celebrate the company's 40th anniversary next year, we take great pride in fostering a collaborative culture both within the practice and with our clients."

Quattro Design Architects is well-regarded for its sustainability practices and has a proven track record in delivering innovative, sustainable design solutions across a range of sectors. This latest announcement reaffirms the company's commitment to maintaining its position as a leader in sustainable design.
