QUATTRO GOES CARBON NEUTRAL

GLOUCESTER, 16th JANUARY 2023. Quattro Design Architects, a leading architectural practice in sustainable design, is excited to announce that it has officially achieved carbon neutral status after joining forces with Earthly.

Having championed sustainable design for almost 40 years, Quattro's dedication to carbon reduction in architecture goes hand in hand with its commitment to climate action. They fully recognise their impact on the environment is two fold; business operations and the projects they design.

Quattro is committed to its stringent carbon reduction plan, and in partnership with Earthly, Quattro annually purchases carbon credits to offset its remaining operational emissions. Further, Quattro is committed to continue creating sustainable designs for clients, advocating carbon reduction practices and to diligent sourcing of sustainable partners.

Robert Walder, Director at Quattro said: "It's really important that we own our part of this global problem. We will, of course, continue to reduce the impact of our designs through the built environment, but more than that, we are taking real positive action for reducing carbon in every aspect of our business, ensuring we are as climate positive as possible. Our entire team is dedicated to reducing our carbon footprint, and creating sustainable designs, to benefit generations to come."
